DETAILED ACTION

1. Claims 1-40 are presented for examination.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

3. Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Martin, Jr. et al (US Patent 6,509,913; hereinafter Martin).

4. As per claim 1, Martin discloses a method and apparatus for tailoring the appearance of a graphical user interface. Martin clearly discloses a method for tailoring the appearance of a graphical user interface including the steps of (1) identifying a graphical user interface whose appearance is to be tailored; (2) providing data of the appearance and controls of the graphical user interface; and (3) tailoring the graphical user interface in accordance with the data. Further, a selected appearance and location of the controls and a user-selected region in which data is to be displayed within the graphical user interface is customized. Furthermore, Martin expressly discloses an editing tool program that is used to tailor a graphical user interface. Please read col. 2, lines 17-44; col. 3, lines 16-28; col. 4, lines 29-38; col. 5, lines 42-44, 61-65; col. 10, lines 30-35, 65-67; col. 11, lines 1-30.

Though applicants claim performing customization of a graphical user interface on a first computer and displaying on a second computer, applicants expressly disclose that one single computer can execute both the editor software and display software [paragraph 0057]. Martin clearly discloses so without any limitation. Martin clearly discloses that the techniques described in the present invention may also be used to modify any graphical user interface window.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

5. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

6. Claims 2-40 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Martin et al (US Patent 6,292,185; hereinafter Martin) in view of Zellweger (US Patent 6,397,222).

7. As per claims 2-40, Martin discloses a method and apparatus for tailoring the appearance of a graphical user interface. Martin clearly discloses a method for tailoring the appearance of a graphical user interface including the steps of (1) identifying a graphical user interface whose appearance is to be tailored; (2) providing data of the appearance and controls of the graphical user interface; and (3) tailoring the graphical user interface in accordance with the data. Further, a selected appearance and location of the controls and a user-selected region in which data is to be displayed within the graphical user interface is customized. Furthermore, Martin expressly discloses an editing tool program that is used to tailor a graphical user interface. Please read col. 2, lines 17-44; col. 3, lines 16-28; col. 4, lines 29-38; col. 5, lines 42-44, 61-65; col. 10, lines 30-35, 65-67; col. 11, lines 1-30.

Martin does not expressly disclose about providing a level of access in the method for tailoring the graphical user interface. But a routineer in the art would know that it is very common in the field of customization or tailoring system to have some sort of security where an unauthorized person cannot alter the graphical user interface unnecessarily. However, Zellweger clearly discloses that not only prior art of authoring system includes a password protection menu access but also the invention disclosed by Zellweger limits access to configuration interface to authorized users only [col. 4, lines 6-12, 50-57; col. 5, lines 50-60]. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to combine the cited references as both are directed to a similar system where a graphical user interface is customized or tailored. Moreover, clearly by having a level of access will protect the system from unwanted or unnecessary changes to a graphical user interface.

Response to Arguments

8. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-40 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
